

Faith Bae, from Hazen High School, is your 2018-2019 Washington State Public Relations Officer. Through FBLA she's been able to learn so much about her passions and skills and the organization has given her the platform to take on new opportunities that continue to build her experience. From the different competitive events to the connections she's made, she believes that FBLA is an organization that prepares you for the world.

Faith is highly interested in creative design and videography which plays a large role in her position as Public Relations Officer. Constantly ready to take on design projects, she involves herself deeply in her community and pushes herself to build her skills.

After high school, Faith plans on attending college in Boston, Massachusetts. She plans on majoring in Visual and Design Communications; working toward her goals of becoming a Creative Director.

She has been a member of Washington FBLA for the past two years. From her past years in FBLA, she has been able to experience competition at the regional and state level. Faith has placed in Public Service Announcement and will be represented Washington at the 2018 NLC in E-Business. As the Public Relations Officer for her local chapter, she has been able to grow the social media influence at Hazen High School. She plans on continually expanding the growth of FBLA as an organization to help others experience the same opportunities she had been given.
